

August 2011 MoneyMinute – Living With Volatility

By Jim Parker, Vice President, DFA Australia Limited

The current renewed volatility in financial markets is reviving unwelcome feelings among many investors – feelings of anxiety, fear, and a sense of powerlessness. These are completely natural responses. Acting on those emotions, though, can end up doing us more harm than good.

At base, the increase in market volatility is an expression of uncertainty. The sovereign debt strains in the US and Europe, together with renewed worries over financial institutions and fears of another recession, are leading market participants to apply a higher discount to risky assets.

So, developed world equities, oil and industrial commodities, emerging markets, and commodity-related currencies like the Australian dollar are weakening as risk aversion drives investors to the perceived safe havens of government bonds, gold, and Swiss francs.

It is all reminiscent of the events of 2008, when the collapse of Lehman Brothers and the sub-prime mortgage crisis triggered a global market correction. This time, however, the focus of concern has turned from private-sector to public-sector balance sheets.

As to what happens next, no one knows for sure. That is the nature of risk. But there are a few points individual investors can keep in mind to make living with this volatility more bearable.

- Remember that markets are unpredictable and do not always react the way the experts predict they will. The recent downgrade by Standard & Poor's of the U.S. government's credit rating, following protracted and painful negotiations on extending its debt ceiling, actually led to a strengthening in Treasury bonds.
- Quitting the equity market at a time like this is like running away from a sale. While prices have been discounted to reflect higher risk, that's another way of saying expected returns are higher. And while the media headlines proclaim that "investors are dumping stocks," remember someone is buying them. Those people are often the long-term investors.
- Market recoveries can come just as quickly and just as violently as the prior correction. For instance, in March 2009 – when market sentiment was last this bad – the S&P 500 turned and put in seven consecutive months of gains totaling almost 80 percent. This is not to predict that a similarly vertically shaped recovery is in the cards this time, but it is a reminder of the dangers for long-term investors of turning paper losses into real ones and paying for the risk without waiting around for the recovery.

- Never forget the power of diversification. While equity markets have had a rocky time in 2011, fixed income markets have flourished – making the overall losses to balanced fund investors a little more bearable. Diversification spreads risk and can lessen the bumps in the road.
- Markets and economies are different things. The world economy is forever changing, and new forces are replacing old ones. As the IMF noted recently, while advanced economies seek to repair public and financial balance sheets, emerging market economies are thriving.* A globally diversified portfolio takes account of these shifts.
- Nothing lasts forever. Just as smart investors temper their enthusiasm in booms, they keep a reserve of optimism during busts. And just as loading up on risk when prices are high can leave you exposed to a correction, dumping risk altogether when prices are low means you can miss the turn when it comes. As always in life, moderation is a good policy.

The market volatility is worrisome, no doubt. The feelings being generated are completely understandable. But through discipline, diversification, and understanding how markets work, the ride can be made bearable. At some point, value will re-emerge, risk appetites will re-awaken, and for those who acknowledged their emotions without acting on them, relief will replace anxiety.

* World Economic Outlook, IMF, April 2011.

 If you have friends who may benefit from the monthly MoneyMinute, please forward this to them. To sign up for your own copy: <http://www.feesonly.com/moneyminute.html>

The articles page on our website covers planning issues from real estate to long-term care, from investment risk to college funding, and more. See the rest at: <http://www.feesonly.com/Articles.html>.

At Investor's Capital Management, LLC, we are independent fee-only financial planners and investment managers. We do not take product commissions, nor do we gain from any portfolio activity. A client's fee is the only payment we receive, so that we work solely in their best interests. As independent financial planners, we have a fiduciary responsibility to our clients to always put their best interests first. This may seem obvious to you, but in fact it is all too rare in the financial services area.

OUR MISSION:

We offer sound, lifetime advice so that our clients can sustain their dignity and independence in retirement, and leave as much as possible to their beneficiaries in a tax efficient way. If we may be of assistance in any way during the weeks and months ahead, please call or email.

To maintain the quality of our service, we take on a limited number of new relationships each year. If we're not able to help someone who contacts us, we'll make sure to refer them to professionals we think highly of.

Learn more at our website: <http://www.feelsonly.com>.

Rich Chambers, CFP®

Julie Schatz, CFP®

Jennifer Cray, CFP®

Investor's Capital Management, LLC, Menlo Park

Offering Unbiased Guidance to Financial Success

Member of the National Association of Personal Financial Advisors (NAPFA)

Phone: 866-966-9291

Fax: 650-472-8924

info@feelsonly.com <http://www.feelsonly.com>

Legal Disclaimer: Investor's Capital Management, LLC <http://www.feelsonly.com>, and the MoneyMinute email does not render or offer to render personalized investment advice or financial planning advice through this free service. This service is limited to the dissemination of general information only. For specific financial advice you must enter into a formal relationship with a financial adviser.